

I am opposed to the reclassification of DSL as an information service. I firmly believe in open access and in giving a share of the market to smaller providers, who tend to be cheaper, more efficient, and much more responsive. In our area, PacBell would become the only provider. They are horribly slow and unresponsive in the areas in which I am already forced to deal with them. Please let the smaller ISP's have a chance to compete. Many of us happily choose them!
